Guide to the Loy Glenn Westfall Cigar Industry Research Collection, 1860-1982

Descriptive Summary

Title: Loy Glenn Westfall Cigar Industry Research Collection
Creator: Westfall, L. Glenn (1943-)
Dates: 1860-1982
ID Number: W24
Size: 22 boxes
Abstract: L. Glenn Westfall, a retired professor of history, donated his Research Files to the Nelson Poynter Memorial Library during the summer of 2005 and a subsequent accession in 2006. The Subject Files follow an alphabetical arrangement and generally maintain the subject designations established by the donor. These boxes represent the largest portion of the collection (4.0 linear feet). Major holdings include research and primary source documents on the Alafia River area, the cigar industry in Florida, mutual aid societies, cultural activities in Ybor City, immigration patterns in the Tampa Bay region, and biographical files. Areas of special interest include clipping files that document activities in the Ocala during the 1880s and 1890s and records of gatherings from the Tampa Old Timers Association during the early 1970s. All manuscript materials in the second accession (boxes 10 and 11) fall into this category. Items in the Sanchez and Haya Real Estate Holdings boxes illustrate the business activities of a company that acquired and sold land parcels during the boom-era days of the cigar industry. Financial records from the late 1920s and early 1930s offer a portrait of the company's assets and liabilities. Abstracts of title provide historical research for various blocks and tracts of land in Ybor City. These boxes also include correspondence sent and received by Martin Carrabello, a Tampa attorney who oversaw the estate after some members of the Sanchez and Haya families had passed away. The Serials and Periodicals box contains various publications collected by Westfall. In addition to newspaper articles and clippings written in the mid and late 1970s about the status of Ybor City, researchers may also consult various issues of the Bulletin of the Suncoast Archaeological Society (coverage 1976-1980) and articles and papers written by Westfall. In the Cigar Art and Miscellaneous Materials reside two distinct types of materials. The cigar art includes lithographic prints and images from cigar manufacturers and printers. This box also contains records of artillery training exercises at Fort Sill, Oklahoma, during the First World War. One item comprises the Government Documents series: the bound "Register of Prisoners Confined in the County Jail of Hillsborough County, Florida," for the years 1904 through 1909. An index in the front provides the accession number of the prisoner; with that number, researchers can examine basic information about the prisoner, his physical makeup, the crime committed, and the disposition of the case. The Films and Media Materials includes three films. Two of these films describe the cigar industry in Ybor City and exist in 16mm format. The other film is 8mm.

Scope/Content: A Tampa native born on 25 October 1911, Theodore Lesley came from a pioneer family that had roots in Hillsborough County dating to 1848. Leroy G. Lesley, his great-grandfather, rode the preaching circuit as a Methodist minister and participated in the Second and Third Seminole Wars (1835-1842 and 1855-1858, respectively). Theodore's grandfather, John T. Lesley, was a native of Madison County born on 12 May 1835 who enlisted in the Confederate forces in 1861 and fought in the Fourth Regiment Infantry. John Lesley also played an important role in the shaping of Tampa's economic and political landscape during the nineteenth century through his service as one of the original directors of First National Bank, his tenure as sheriff of Hillsborough County, and his activities in the Florida legislature. Theodore's parents, Theodore and May Yancey Lesley, continued his family's traditions in shaping Tampa's development. The elder Theodore had served as Tax Collector in Hillsborough County. May Yancey, a native of Cusseta, Georgia, came to Florida at a young age, graduated from the old Hillsborough High School, became a teacher in Tampa and at Anclote (near present-day Tarpon Springs), and gained prominence as a local suffragette. In 1919, she wrote and helped establish Florida's compulsory school law, a measure passed by the legislature as a local option that districts throughout Florida embraced. The younger Theodore embraced the study of local and regional history. He developed an excellent collection of Florida history materials and began service as a member of the Hillsborough County Historical Commission when a legislative act in 1949 led to its creation. In 1966, he became the second Hillsborough County Historian, a post he held for more than a decade. In this capacity, he developed exhibits for the museum and built collections. His work with other cultural organizations included duties as a director of the Florida Historical Society, an active member of Barrio Latino, and leadership posts with the Society of the Territory of Florida and the Florida Genealogical Society. He became ill in June 1978 and entered Tampa General Hospital for treatments. He passed away on June 25 of that year.
