Medical Talk

Shingles, when built up on the hand or the foot, is a very painful and serious disease. All of us, and especially parents, must be on our guard to prevent it in young children. The disease is spread by direct contact with an infected person, or by contact with clothing or other objects that have been in contact with the infected person.

The disease is characterized by a red, painful rash that appears on the skin. The rash is caused by the varicella virus, which is the same virus that causes chickenpox. The rash appears most often on the face, neck, and chest, but it can also appear on the arms and legs.

The rash is usually accompanied by fever, headache, and fatigue. The rash usually lasts for several days, and it may be present for up to 10 days. The rash is contagious until it is no longer painful.

Treatment

The best treatment for shingles is to prevent it. There is a vaccine that can help prevent shingles in people who have never had it before. The vaccine is most effective if given before the age of 60.

If shingles does develop, the following treatments may help:

- Antibiotics: If the rash is infected, antibiotics may be prescribed.
- Antiviral medications: Antiviral medications may be prescribed to reduce the severity of the rash and to help prevent complications.
- Analgesics: Pain relievers such as acetaminophen or ibuprofen may be prescribed to help relieve pain.
- Cold compresses: Applying cold compresses to the skin may help relieve pain and reduce the rash.

Prevention

- Avoid contact: Avoid contact with anyone who has shingles.
- Wash hands: Wash your hands frequently, especially after contact with someone who has shingles.
- Stay healthy: Stay healthy to reduce your risk of getting shingles. This includes getting enough rest, eating a healthy diet, and exercising.
